I am writing as a private citizen concerned about the health and well-being of the Australian community, especially the health of future generations. I am a university graduate and retired educational administrator, who at 90 years of age, has seen in my time the widespread harm that has been caused by various substances and processes including radiation, excess fat, sugar and fat, smoking, alcohol, asbestos, cleaning products etc etc etc , the proponents of which have always maintained that the dangers from these products and processes are safe and no danger to the community.

Growing evidence proves the inaccuracy and falsehood of their claims.

I therefore wish to object strongly to proposals to extend radiation of fresh fruits in Australia and New Zealand.

As far as I can understand, the dangers to the health of human beings (and animals) in present and future generations are very tangible, and radiation cannot be guaranteed to be safe, for people and for the wider environment.

Yours sincerely
